Cortado Enables IT to Integrate Personally-Owned BlackBerry Smartphones with Corporate IT

The new Cortado Corporate Server 5.0 supports BlackBerry smartphones with BlackBerry Internet Service

(Berlin/Orlando, April 2010) At WES 2010 in Orlando, Florida, the mobile business expert Cortado will announce the release of a new version of its Cortado Corporate Server. The Cortado Corporate Server 5.0 version allows businesses to easily integrate the personal BlackBerry® smartphones of employees, freelancers, and project-specific contractors into their IT environment.

The immense popularity of BlackBerry smartphones isn't just confined to businesses. More and more individual users are also purchasing BlackBerry smartphones. If these smartphones are to be integrated into corporate IT, it can present a major challenge to the system administration. The reason: smartphones purchased by individuals can have their corporate email integrated with their BlackBerry smartphone through any Internet-enabled BlackBerry service plan.

The Cortado Corporate Server 5.0 offers a simple solution for the integration of personal BlackBerry smartphones into the infrastructure of a company. The new Cortado solution ensures that employees can have access to their corporate resources. Employees connected in this way will continue to have their existing BlackBerry® Email and will also be able to access shared drives on the corporate network, view and manage files, send them by email, print, fax, scan, copy, or render them as PDF files from their BlackBerry smartphone (www.cortado.com/corporate).

As a special feature, the new Cortado Corporate Server offers a completely novel Active Directory search for network printers. With this new function, the user can search in a template for the name of the printer he needs, select this device, and immediately use it to print. A function primarily of interest for employees who do not just sit at a desk, but want to, or have to access printing resources regardless of the location.

"Integrating employees' existing BlackBerry smartphones into corporate IT to give them additional capacity to work and act is one of today's challenges for IT departments," said Thorsten Hesse, Manager Innovative Products for ThinPrint and Cortado. "This affects employees who want to use their personal BlackBerry smartphones for work too, as well as

Cortado combines the entire computing expertise of ThinPrint AG to create mobile communication solutions. The mobile business expert's vision is complete independence from location-bound workplaces and computer-based communication methods. The core of the Cortado solutions is the company's Virtual Desktop Processes technology (VDP). Unlike other providers, Cortado does not transmit the complete desktop to the mobile device. Instead, the BlackBerry, iPhone, Android, etc., smartphone is outfitted with individual PC functions optimized for the small screen display and is thereby transformed into a full-fledged workstation. Cortado's VDP products are available both as in-house solutions and cloud services. The Cortado portfolio is rounded out by individual business apps and solution hosting from well-established third-party providers such as Microsoft Exchange and SharePoint. Security-certified hosting centers in the USA and Germany guarantee highest availability and security of all hosted services and customer data. Thanks to ThinPrint AG's extensive experience as the worldwide leading provider of printing solutions for wide area networks, Cortado has offices in the USA, Germany, Japan, and Australia, as well as a close-knit network of partners around the globe. Cortado acts as a Microsoft Gold Certified Partner, Nokia Forum Pro member, and a top BlackBerry Select Alliance Partner. Working closely together with over 20 carriers worldwide, ThinPrint's mobile division is an established, professional partner and service provider for mobile business users and private users alike.
